Preface

This is the sixth year we have made this publication. As previous years the publication is divided into two sections. The first contains information about Sida's development co-operation, which are implemented in Africa, Asia, Latin America and certain countries in Europe. In this part you find information on sectors, type of assistance and some time series among other things.

The second section refers to Sida's co-operation with Central and Eastern Europe. We are continuing to publish the same variables in this section as in the previous one.

After these sections we have a short chapter containing quality declaration and how this publication is comparable with others. We strongly recommend and suggest that you read this chapter.

It is important that the reader have in mind that the information in this publication concerns the conditions in 2004 and earlier. Some conditions have changed since then, including the overall goals for the development co-operation.

The information in this publication is only a summary of the information available. If you need more details or wish to make any comments concerning anything in this publication, please feel free to contact

Helena Persson at helena.persson@sida.se or +46(0)8 698 55 16

Camilla Grubbström at camilla.grubbstrom@sida.se or + 46 (0)8 698 40 85.

We hope you enjoy reading this booklet!

Sida's development co-operation

THE DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION OBJECTIVES

Sida's programmes of development co-operation are implemented in Africa, Asia, Latin America and certain European countries. Co-operation in 2004 is guided by one overall goal – to contribute to an environment supportive of poor people's own efforts to improve their living-conditions. Sida's contribution are based on the changes that the partner countries themselves wish to implement and are prepared to allocate resources to. Sida's mission is to make a careful analysis of the types of contributions that can achieve the desired results and thereafter build up knowledge and provide capital. The Swedish Parliament has adopted the following central component elements in order to achieve the overall goal.

- Respect for human rights
- Democracy and good governance
- Equality between women and man
- Sustainable use of natural resources and the protection of the environment
- Economic growth
- Social development and social security
- Conflict management
- Global public good

DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION BY COUNTRY AND SECTOR

Sida's partner countries differ considerably and their preconditions for development are equally diverse. Where the largest partner countries are concerned, Sida establishes country strategies, which are then adopted by the Government of Sweden. These country strategies are important instrument for planning and monitoring of development co-operation at national level.

The focus of support and selection of sectors, programmes and projects are based on this overall assessment. This approach also determines decisions concerning the scope of co-operation, time schedules, forms of financing and participants. Sida's support shall reflect the efforts, reality and development needs of each individual country. Sida's operations are based on a holistic approach, which also takes into consideration Sweden's opportunities to make meaningful contributions.

Disbursements 2004

In 2004 Sida disbursed SEK 11 766 million for development co-operation. In addition to this Sida used SEK 541 million for administration.

Of the funds, 40.1 per cent (SEK 4 716 million) were allocated to countries in Africa. The ten partner countries obtaining the largest assistance were Tanzania, Mozambique, Ethiopia, Uganda, Kenya, Zambia, Sudan, South Africa, Angola and Congo, the Democratic republic. Most of these countries are among the poorest in the world. Of the funds 35.7 per cent (SEK 1 681 million) financed projects in the social sectors, and 21.7 per cent (SEK 1 025 million) financed projects in the human rights and democratic governance sectors.

Countries in Asia received 22.8 per cent (SEK 2 680 million) of the funds. The main partner countries were Afghanistan, Palestinian Administrated Area, Vietnam, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Cambodia, Laos, Iraq, China and India. Of the funds 33.6 per cent (SEK 900 million) were allocated to projects in the social sectors, and 27.6 per cent (SEK 740 million) to human rights and democratic governance sectors. Some 16 per cent (SEK 429 million) financed projects in infrastructure, trade and urban development.

Latin America's share of the funds was 11.7 per cent (SEK 1 381 million) in 2004. The main partner countries were Nicaragua, Bolivia, Honduras, Guatemala, Colombia and El Salvador. Of the funds to Latin America 40.2 per cent (SEK 555 million) were allocated to human rights and democratic governance and 19.8 per cent (SEK 274 million) to projects in the social sectors.

Some 7.4 per cent (SEK 872 million) of the funds were allocated to Europe (Western Balkans and Caucasus). The main partner countries were Bosnia-Herzegovina, Serbia & Montenegro and Macedonia. Of the funds 46.2 per cent (SEK 403 million) financed projects in the human rights and democratic governance sectors, and 27.8 per cent (SEK 242 million) were allocated to projects in the sectors of infrastructure, trade and urban development.

Some 18 per cent (SEK 2 118 million) were not allocated to any specific region or country. Of these funds, 25.8 per cent (SEK 546 million) were targeted on social sectors and 16.3 per cent (SEK 344 million) on sectors in the field of human rights and democratic governance.

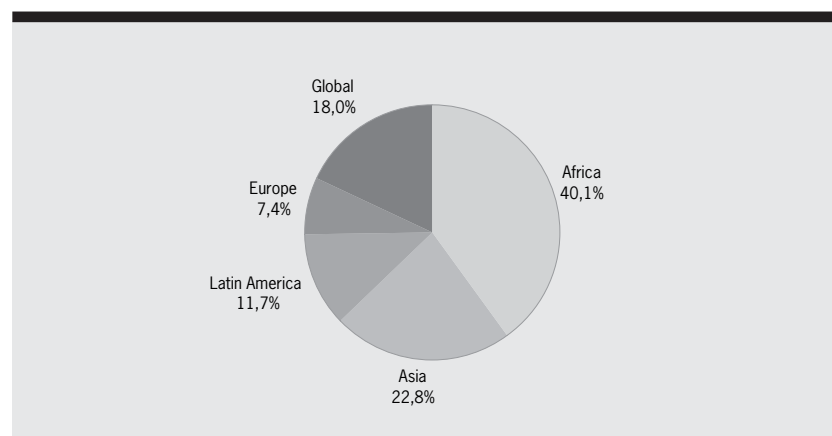

Sida is in 2004 classifying contributions in five main sectors, Human rights & democratic governance; Social sectors; Infrastructure, trade and urban development; Natural resources and Other.

Some 26.1 per cent (SEK 3 067 million) were allocated to the sector Human rights & democratic governance. Contributions are made for Human rights; the Legal system; Democracy; Public administration; Promotion of peace and conflict management; and Other aspects of human rights and democratic governance.

Projects in Social sectors, i.e. Education; Health care; Population issues; Culture etc received 29.5 per cent (SEK 3 473 million) of the funds.

Some 15.2 per cent (SEK 1 792 million) of the funds were allocated to Transport; Telecommunications, IT and postal communications; Energy; Water supply and sanitation; Housing; Trade & industry; Financial sector etc which make up the Infrastructure, trade and urban development sector.

DIAGRAM 1: DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION BY REGION 2004

Projects in the area of Natural resources (land, water, pollution and environmental protection) received 10.9 per cent (SEK 1 280 million).

Some 18.3 per cent (SEK 2 153 million) were classified in the main sector Other.

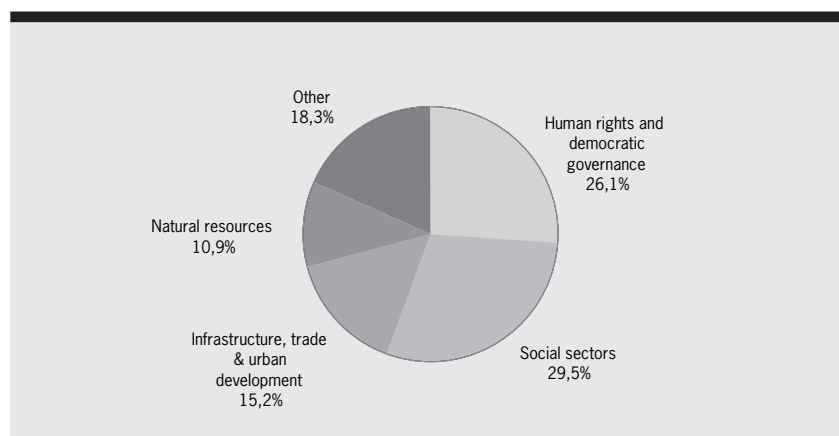

Sida disbursed SEK 11 766 million for development co-operation in 2004; a 14 per cent increase (SEK 1 460 million) compared to 2003. Approximately half of the disbursements in 2004 were made to 25 of Sida's partner countries (23 in 2003, 30 in 2002 and 25 in 2001).

The largest proportion of Sida's development co-operation funds is allocated to Africa and it is therefore natural that Sida's largest partner countries are African. This has been the case for several years. Tanzania and Mozambique are the largest partner countries. Together they received 9.3 per cent (SEK 1 099 million) of Sida's funds, corresponding to 23.3 per cent of the funds to Africa.

Afghanistan and Palestinian Administrated Area have the leading position among the Asian partner countries. Together they received 5.9 per cent (SEK 695 million) of Sida's funds, which is 25.9 per cent of the share to Asia.

Disbursements to Latin America have increased slightly in comparison to 2003. Nicaragua and Bolivia are the two largest partner countries in this region and they received 4.4 per cent (SEK 513 million) of Sida's funds, which is 37.1 per cent of the disbursements to Latin America.

The two largest partner countries in Europe are Bosnia & Herzegovina and Serbia & Montenegro. Some 3.8 per cent (SEK 442 million) of the funds were allocated to these countries. This represents 50.7 per cent of the funds to European ODA-countries.

Percentage (%) states each country's share of Sida's total development co-operation. Nicaragua, for example, received 2.6 per cent of Sida's disbursements in 2004.

The accumulated percentage (Acc. %) states the proportion of Sida's development co-operation that the countries receive together. The four largest partner countries, for example, (Tanzania, Mozambique, Afghanistan and Ethiopia) received together 16 per cent of Sida's total development co-operation in 2004.

Development co-operation by country and sector over the years

The disbursements made by Sida decreased in the first years of the period 1997 to 2004. The lowest point was in 1998 with disbursements amounting to SEK 6.9 billion. The decrease was partly due to a ceiling placed on disbursements by the Swedish government. In 2001 the disbursements amounted to SEK 11.5 billion. After that, the disbursement decreased, to SEK 10.9 billion in 2002 and to SEK 10.3 billion in 2003. In 2004 there was a change and the disbursement increased to SEK 11.8 billion. Over the period 1997 to 2004 there has been an increase in disbursements of 54.8 per cent (SEK 4.2 billion).

Disbursements to Africa increased during the period by SEK 1.6 billion. Disbursements to Asia increased by SEK 0.8 billion but the proportion of funding decreased compared to other regions, from 24.5 per cent to 22.8 per cent. Funding to Latin America increased by more than SEK 0.5 billion and the proportion of the fund slightly increased from 11.5 per cent to 11.7 per cent. Disbursements to Europe (ODA-countries) more than doubled (from SEK 326 million to SEK 871 million) during the period, which resulted in an increase of the share from 4.3 per cent to 7.4 per cent.

1) Prior to May 1997 – Zaire.

2) Eastern, Western, Central and Southern Africa and Regional South of Sahara.

3) More advanced developing countries and territories according to the OECD-DAC recipient list.

Disbursements to all main sectors have increased during the period 1998–2004. The main sector Human rights and democratic governance received SEK 1.6 billion more in 2004 compared with 1998. This resulted in an increase of the share from 21.3 per cent to 26.1 per cent. The increase in disbursements to the Social sectors were a bit slighter and ended up in SEK 1.2 billion, and the share decreased from 32.8 per cent to 29.5 per cent. Disbursements to the sector Infrastructure, trade and urban development increased by almost SEK 0.6 billion during the period, but it resulted in a decrease of the share from 18.0 per cent to 15.2 per cent. The smallest increase in disbursements occurred in the main sector Natural resources (SEK 0.3 billion).

DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION BY TYPE OF ASSISTANCE

Sida has ten types of assistance, Project support, Sector programme support, Technical co-operation, International training programmes, Credits, Guarantees, Economic reforms, Humanitarian assistance, Research and Contributions to NGO:s.

DIAGRAM 5: DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION BY TYPE OF ASSISTANCE 2004

Project support is the largest type (41.3 per cent) and includes Capacity development; Investments; Information; Strategies & studies; Evaluation & audits; and Election observers & secondment of personnel. It is Sida's co-operation partner that implements the project while Sida acts as a financier and dialogue partner.

Sector Programme Support, sps, is Sida's contribution to multidonor and co-ordinated financial and professional support that forms an integral part of a partner government led and comprehensive reform within a policy area or sector. In order to describe the total reform effort i.e. the reform, the external support given to it and the forms of co-operation, the term Sector Wide Approach, SWAP may be used. In 2004 Sida allocated 6.8 per cent of the funds to sector programme support.

Credits account for 2.5 per cent of the contributions. There are different types of credits; concessionary credits, soft loans, credit lines, conditional loans, funds and micro-financing.

Support to Economic Reforms (Budget support and debt relief) account for 6.8 per cent of Sida's contributions. This support is granted to poor and indebted countries, which are implementing economic reform programmes with poverty alleviation as a clear objective. The support aims to assist countries to implement their Poverty Reduction Strategies (PRS). Furthermore, countries have to respect human rights and promote democratic governance. For budget support to be considered, countries must also have a transparent state budget and a satisfactory system of public financial management. The agreements on support for economic reforms normally have a duration of one year. If Sida's partner countries show that they are making considerable efforts in respect of economic reforms and poverty alleviation, Sida can consider longer commitments.

As a means of work Technical co-operation is included in the main of Sida's work. Contributions classified as type of assistance "Technical co-operation" does not show the complete substance, only a fraction. There are components of Technical co-operation in many contributions classified as other types of assistance. The 4.6 per cent classified as type of assistance "Technical co-operation" in 2004 are only a specific part of all Technical co-operation that Sida works with.

Sida statistics distinguishes between two types of technical co-operation: contract-financed technical co-operation and other technical co-operation (not contract-financed). The objective of contract-financed technical co-operation is to promote human resource development in low and middle-income countries and to supply know-how in areas that are of strategic importance for the development of partner countries. It is intended that programmes of contract-financed technical co-operation should increase exchanges of skills and experience between Sweden and partner countries and encourage a wide range of Swedish organisations and institutions to participate in the programmes.

Disbursements for international training programmes (which are normally arranged in Sweden) stayed at SEK 209 million (1.8 per cent) in 2004.

The remaining types of assistance will be presented in the following sections.

Humanitarian assistance

Swedish humanitarian assistance has the objective of alleviating the consequences of natural disasters and armed conflicts for those affected. Priority is given to countries that lack resources of their own to mitigate the effects. Sida works on the basis of the needs of those affected and utilises local capacity as well as the skills of the organisations implementing the projects.

Humanitarian assistance accounts for 14.8 per cent of Sida's development co-operation. It is mostly given in situations of conflict that lead to tragic interruptions in the normal lives of people. Swedish humanitarian assistance is based on international humanitarian law and the principles of impartiality, neutrality and independence of the humanitarian actors. Long-term effects are taken into consideration in the planning of the projects, which, in addition to emergency relief, can have the character of prevention, preparedness, rehabilitation and reconstruction.

Humanitarian assistance is administered through grants to Swedish and international non-governmental organisations (NGO:s), the international Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement, and UN bodies as well as through Swedish government agencies.

Prevention – Contributions to decrease vulnerability and increase preparedness to natural disasters, and to activities that promote dialogue, enhances security and addresses structural causes of armed conflict.

Emergency assistance – Contributions of humanitarian assistance to victims of disasters and conflicts.

Reconstruction – Contributions to social reconstruction after natural disasters and conflicts.

Other – Contributions connected to natural disasters and conflicts that do not fall under the other headings.

Research

The objective of research co-operation is to support research that is of significance for development in developing countries. This is done by providing support to improve the capacity of developing countries to run research programmes of their own and by providing support to research that can contribute to the solution of important development problems. Research co-operation accounted for 7.1 per cent (SEK 837 million) of Sida's development co-operation in 2004.

Bilateral research co-operation.

More than 21 per cent of Sida's appropriation for research co-operation are allocated to bilateral co-operation with developing countries, primarily to develop national research capacity. Swedish bilateral research co-operation has used a model based on co-operation between universities in a developing country and universities in primarily Sweden or neighbouring countries. Programmes of scientific co-operation, as well as research training leading to research degrees for students from Sida's partner countries, are run on the basis of projects jointly formulated by the Swedish and the partner countries' institutions. These programmes combine work at the home institution in a partner country with research studies at the Swedish partner institution.

International research programmes.

Sida supports research programmes run under the auspices of the World Health Organisation (WHO), the Consultative Group for International Agricultural Research (CGIAR), United Nations Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD), and United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation (UNESCO). These programmes retain an overview of ongoing research, identify knowledge gaps relating to development needs and channel support for addressing such issues. More than 27 per cent of Sida's fund for research co-operation were allocated to international programmes in 2004.

Regional research programmes.

This type of support aims to mobilise national capacity and address thematic research priorities in areas of common interest. Sida is supporting regional research networks in Africa, Latin America and Asia that focus, for example, on social sciences, energy, environment and biotechnology. Almost 24 per cent of Sida's appropriation for research co-operation in 2004 were allocated to regional research programmes.

Special programmes and initiatives.

Sida supports research in important areas that require special attention. Several special projects are linked to the three action programmes that are reported to OECD-DAC each year: sustainable development, gender equality, and peace, democracy and human rights.

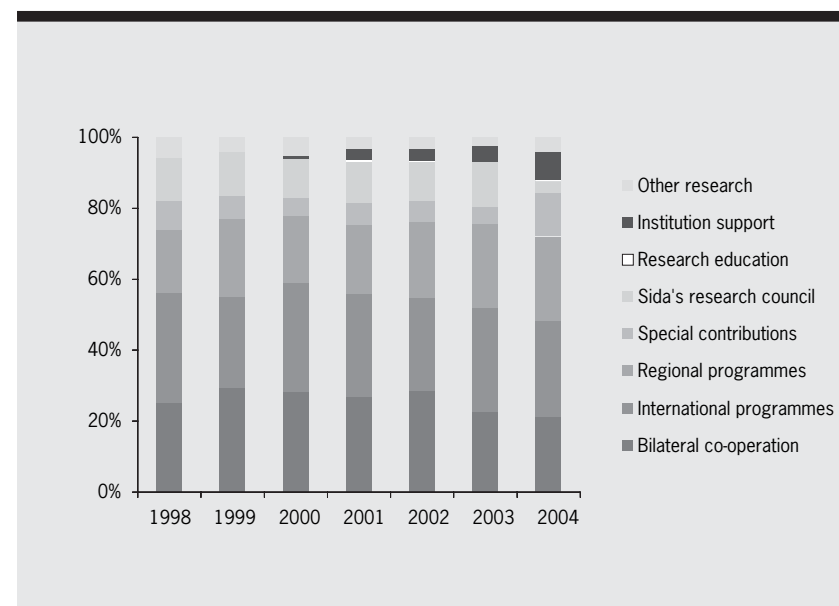

Sida's Research Council.

Researchers in Swedish institutions can apply each year for grants for research into problems of relevance to developing countries. Here Sida functions as a research council and five scientific reference groups are attached to Sida for the assessment of applications. One important objective is to give Swedish researchers the possibility to study development problems and thereby to establish and strengthen development research at Swedish universities. In 2004 SEK 28 million were allocated for Sida's Research Council.

Between 1998 and 2004 Sida's research co-operation, as a share of total disbursements, decreased slightly from 8.0 per cent to 7.1 per cent, but actual disbursements for Sida's research co-operation increased from SEK 547 million to SEK 837 million.

Contributions to non-governmental organisations

Over 300 Swedish NGO:s are active in international development co-operation. Their activities, which include approximately 2000 projects in more than 100 different countries, cover a large number of different areas. Some organisations, together with their partners, work to influence normative issues such as human rights or children's rights. Others work together with local organisations that provide direct support to specially vulnerable or marginalized target groups in the form, for example, of health care or educational facilities. Many organisations combine both functions. Common to all these inputs is that they are implemented in co-operation with local partners in partner countries.

The so-called project grants are one of the foundations of Sida's co-operation with Swedish NGO:s. They permit the organisations to run activities for which they receive grants from Sida. The main rule in 2004 is that the NGO must contribute 20 per cent of the total amount of the project.

Today project grants are channelled through 13 so-called frame organisations. These organisations administer the applications for grants from organisations under them and present these to Sida for approval. The 13 frame organisations are:

- Africa Groups of Sweden
- Diakonia, Sweden
- Swedish NGO Centre for Development Cooperation (Forum Syd)

- LO/TCO Council of International Trade Union Cooperation
- Olof Palme International Center, OPIC
- PMU – Interlife
- Swedish Save the Children
- Swedish Cooperative Centre, SCC
- Church of Sweden Aid/ Church of Sweden Mission, SFRV
- Swedish Organisation of Handicapped International Aid, SHIA
- Swedish Missionary Council, SMR
- Swedish Society for Nature Conservation, SNF
- Training for Development Assistance, UBV

The frame organisations also receive information grants from Sida for their information projects in Sweden. These projects are intended to improve understanding of development and stimulate opinion in issues related to development and development co-operation.

In total, contributions to NGO:s from Sida's different budgetlines sum up to 14.2 per cent (SEK 1 675 million) in the form of the type of assistance "Contributions to NGO:s" (diagram 5). In addition to this, other types of assistance also use NGO:s as a channel for the funds: SEK 2 110 million in 2004. All together, Sida's development co-operation via NGO:s ended at SEK 3 795 million in 2004.

The total disbursements channelled via NGO:s increased from SEK 2 371 million in 1998 to SEK 3 795 million in 2004, but their share of Sida's total disbursements decreased from 34.5 per cent to 32.2 per cent during the same period. Funds channelled via international NGO:s increased its share of the funds channelled via NGO:s, from 8.5 per cent in 1998 to 28.5 per cent in 2004, as did the funds channelled via partner country NGO:s, from 6.9 per cent in 1998 to 13.6 per cent in 2004. Funds channelled via other NGO:s decreased from 17.2 per cent in 1998 to 8.2 per cent in 2004. Also Swedish NGO:s received a smaller share of the fund, from 67.4 per cent in 1998 to 49.7 per cent in 2004, but is still the largest channel of delivery compared with the other NGO:s.

SIDA'S "POLICY OBJECTIVES"

Sida has established policy objectives in pivotal areas of international development co-operation to fulfill the requirements to OECD-DAC reporting: peace, democracy & human rights; gender equality; and environment & sustainable development. Sida also have information in the planning system PLUS on how the projects have been designed to contribute to poverty reduction.

The figures presented under these headings are an indication of the proportion of Sida's contributions that can be considered to be within the scope of a particular policy objective.

Poverty reduction

Reducing poverty is the overriding goal of all Sida's international development co-operation. Sida's point of departure is that the governments of partner countries are responsible for reducing poverty and for sustainable development. The programme states how Sida can support the efforts and improve the capacity of the partner countries. In countries where poverty reduction is not given priority by the government, the main part of Sida's support shall be directed to programmes that provide direct benefits for the poor, mainly through non-governmental channels.

Economic growth is a prerequisite for the sustainable reduction of poverty. There are no examples in which mass poverty has been eliminated without the aid of strong economic growth. But economic growth in itself is not sufficient. It must be part of a deliberate overall policy for poverty reduction.

Sida distinguishes between four categories of poverty reduction projects and programmes:

Direct effect – Usually targeted projects and sector support aimed directly at local communities with poor groups of people.

Projects and programmes in which poor groups are included – Programmes or projects which reach several social categories including the poor, e.g. support to primary education and primary health care, which is targeted at the total population in an area but includes poor groups as well.

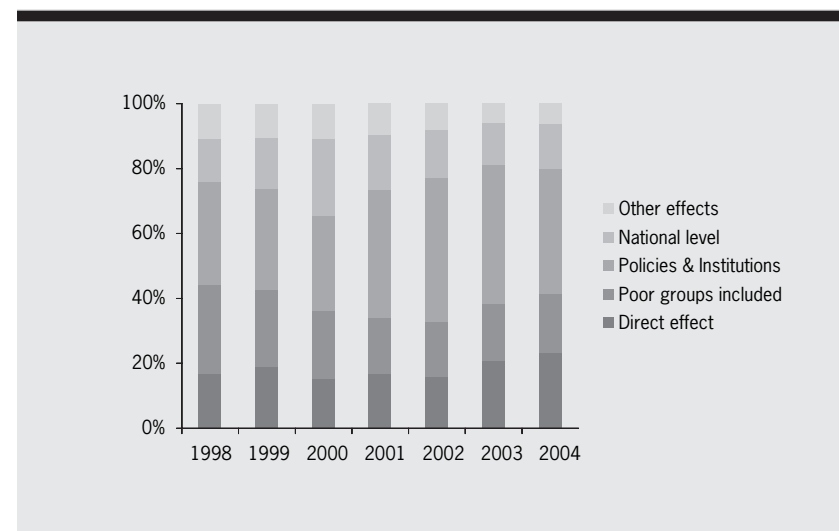

Indirect effect through policies and institutions – Projects or programmes which promote equitable growth-oriented policies, macro-economic stability and reforms, which includes improvements for poor groups by removing systemic constraints at national and international levels. Examples of such projects are legislation and institution building which promote economic and social growth and democratic governance; tax reforms; and macro-economic reforms which stimulate growth and increase revenues and which may lead to employment opportunities for the poor.

Support at national level, which indirectly affects poverty reduction – Projects which stimulate the growth of resources and employment opportunities and which preserve natural resources. This group includes balance of payments support and debt relief, investments in infrastructure (including transport, telecommunications and energy), trade and projects for the preservation of natural resources.

Between 1998 and 2004 projects with an effect on poverty reduction increased, from 89.2 per cent to 93.6 per cent. Examples of projects that have been classified as “other effects” are internal Sida studies in a particular area or methods development projects. In the long-term these can also have an effect on poverty reduction. During 1998 to 2004 projects with a “direct effect” increased, from 16.6 per cent in 1998 to 23.2 per cent in 2004 and so did Projects with “indirect effect through policies and institutions”, from 31.8 per cent to 38.5 per cent. “Projects and programmes in which poor groups are included” decreased from 27.5 per cent in 1998 to 18.2 per cent in 2004 while projects with “support to national level which indirectly affects poverty reduction” stayed at almost the same level.

DIAGRAM 9: POVERTY REDUCTION 1998–2004

Peace, democracy and human rights

Democratic development also provides a good – though not insufficient – foundation on which to build a society based on equality and to give people the opportunity to participate in development. Government institutions, and a civil society that functions effectively, are of fundamental importance for the consolidation of democracy.

Democratic development and respect for human rights provide basic instruments to achieve peaceful solutions to conflicts and to prevent armed conflicts.

Sida considers that the fulfilment of certain minimum requirements is essential for democratic governance: free elections including the possibility to choose between alternative candidates; an independent legal system; and respect for fundamental democratic rights and privileges.

Principal objective – The strengthening of peace, democracy and human rights is the primary objective of these operations. The project is expected to promote democratic processes or strengthen respect for human rights. Material will be produced on project goals and on the activities relevant to the strengthening of peace, democracy and human rights.

Significant objective – One of the project objectives is to strengthen peace, democracy and human rights. Material will be produced on project activities, relevant to the strengthening of peace, democracy and human rights.

In 1998 69.8 per cent of the projects had either a principal or significant peace, democracy and human rights objective. This increased to 82.2 per cent in 2004. Projects with peace, democracy and human rights as the principal objective have remained constant, at around 20 per cent during 1998–2001, but have increased to 36.0 per cent in 2004. Projects with peace, democracy and human rights as a significant objective decreased from 50.0 per cent in 1998 to 46.2 per cent in 2004.

Gender equality

World poverty is increasingly depicted by the face of a woman. In many countries women are not allowed to own land and other assets. They also hold a weaker financial position than men in the family, the local community, the nation and internationally, at the same time as they have limited opportunities of participating in the decisions which affect their situation. Violence against women is a problem and women in particular are seriously affected by armed conflicts.

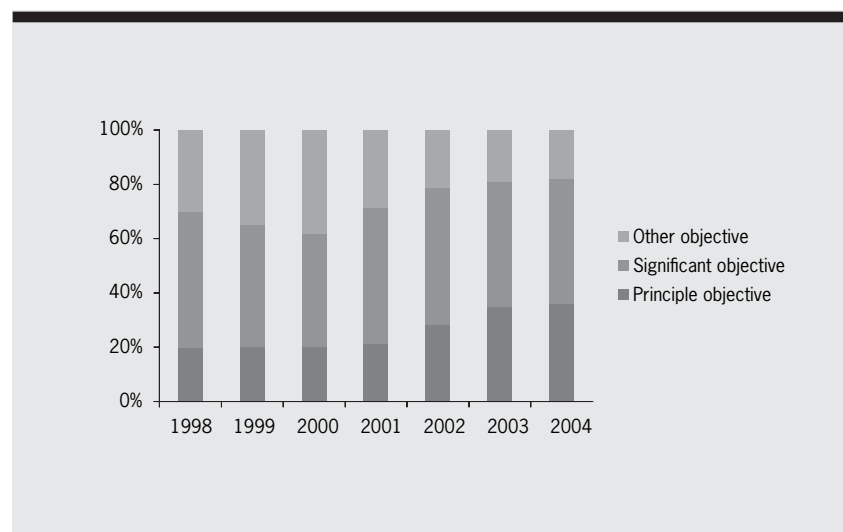

Equality between women and men is a human rights issue and a prerequisite for sustainable development.

Sida gives priority to measures that promote the human rights and economic independence of women and equality where participation in political and economic decision-making processes is concerned.

Principal objective – Promotion of equality between women and men is the primary objective of the project. An analysis of the situation of women and men is part of the project. Two of the criteria listed below have been fulfilled.

Significant objective – Promotion of equality between women and men is one of the project objectives. An analysis of the situation of women and men has been made and two of the criteria listed below have been fulfilled.

DIAGRAM 10: PEACE, DEMOCRACY AND HUMAN RIGHTS 1998–2004

Criteria

- Strategies and implementation plans are based on the gender equality perspective and its consequences
- Specific measures have been taken to deal with existing constraints on the full and equal participation of women
- Specific measures have been taken to secure equal control over the outcomes of the project by both women and men
- Indicators have been developed or will be developed for monitoring and evaluation which will make it possible to measure results from a gender equality perspective
- Gender equality specialists have been utilised in the design phase and will be utilised in the implementation and follow up phases and/or gender equality training has been offered/is planned
- Consultations have been held with both women and men

In 2004 the proportion of projects in which gender equality was a principal or significant equality objective was 77.1 per cent, an increase from 63.2 per cent in 1998. The proportion of projects in which gender equality was the principal objective increased from 7.0 per cent in 1998 to 12.7 per cent in 2004 while the proportion of projects in which gender equality was a significant objective increased from 56.2 per cent to 64.5 per cent during the same period.

Environment and sustainable development

Environmental aspects shall be integrated into all Sida's development co-operation programmes in accordance with the undertakings ensuing from Sweden's accession to Agenda 21 and other international environmental conventions. All projects are assessed on the basis of their effect on the environment.

Sida gives priority to supporting the management of scarce water resources; agriculture and forestry/soil conservation; the marine environment; the urban environment; and environment-friendly consumption and production of energy.

DIAGRAM 11: GENDER EQUALITY 1998–2004

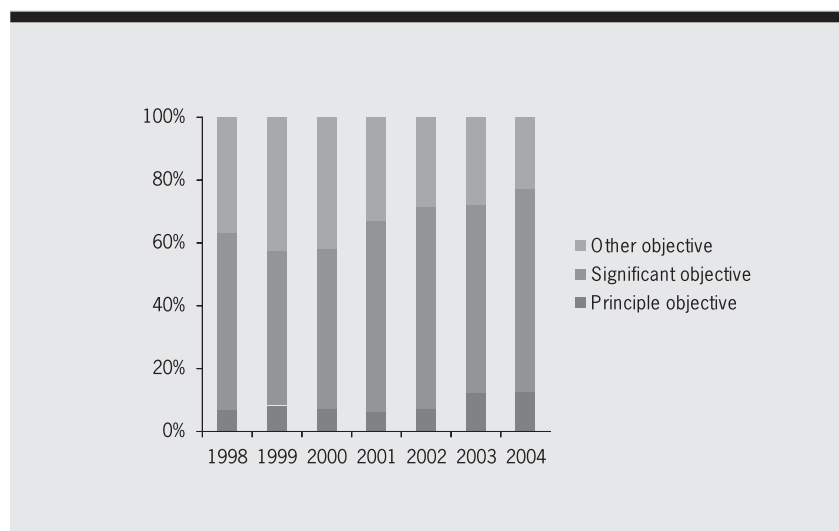

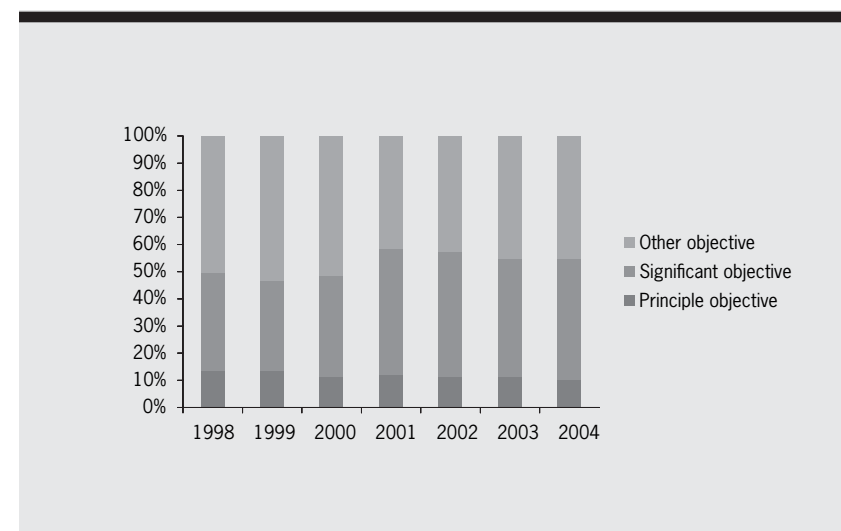

DIAGRAM 12: ENVIRONMENT AND SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT 1998–2004

Principal objective – The project shall protect or improve the physical and/or biological environment, promote the sustainable management of natural resources, decrease existing levels of environmental degradation and contain specific measures for the development or strengthening of environmental policies, legislation, capacity, public administration or other organisations/instruments for the preservation of the environment.

Significant objective – One of the project's objectives is to protect or improve the physical and/or biological environment.

In 1998 the proportion of projects in which the environment and sustainable development was a principal or a significant objective was 49.7 per cent. This increased to 54.7 per cent in 2004. This change was due to an increase of projects in which it was a significant objective; from 36.3 per cent in 1998 to 44.4 per cent in 2004.

Sida's Co-operation with Central and Eastern Europe

Most countries in Central and Eastern Europe are in a process of transition from dictatorships to democracy and from planned economies to market economies. In some countries the transition has been implemented with great rapidity and success. A closer relationship with the EU is a key issue for the region and in 2004 the EU was enlarged with ten new member states. Sida's co-operation aims at promoting the process of transition through support to political, economic and social reforms, co-operation with neighbouring countries in respect of the environment, energy, and equality, and support for integration with the EU.

CO-OPERATION WITH CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE BY COUNTRY AND MAIN SECTOR

The OECD-DAC has classified countries in Europe as either developing countries (ODA countries, Official Development Assistance countries) or countries that have not been classified as developing countries (OA countries, Official Aid countries). The countries classified as OA countries are Belarus, Bulgaria, Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Romania, Russia, Slovenia, Slovak Republic and Ukraine. In this chapter we will look closer to the statistics of those countries. Development cooperation with the Baltic States was phased out in 2004. Support for the OA countries is mainly allocated to Russia, Ukraine and Belarus.

In 2004 the overall goal became the same for Central and Eastern Europe as for the rest of the regions where work is done by Sida; to contribute to an environment supportive of poor people's own efforts to improve their quality of life. The overall goal in respect of poverty reduction is interpreted and expressed in concrete terms in the country strategies. Sida's operations in Central and Eastern Europe are guided by current country and regional strategies. Each country has its own distinctive character and the potential for development varies considerably from country to country. Sida makes proposals for country strategies, which shall be approved by the Government, for the most important partner countries. These strategies are the most important instrument to guide co-operation at country level. The objectives of the support and the selection of sectors, programmes and projects are determined on the basis of an overall assessment. This holistic approach also determines the scope of co-operation, the time frame, forms of financing and participants.

Disbursements 2004

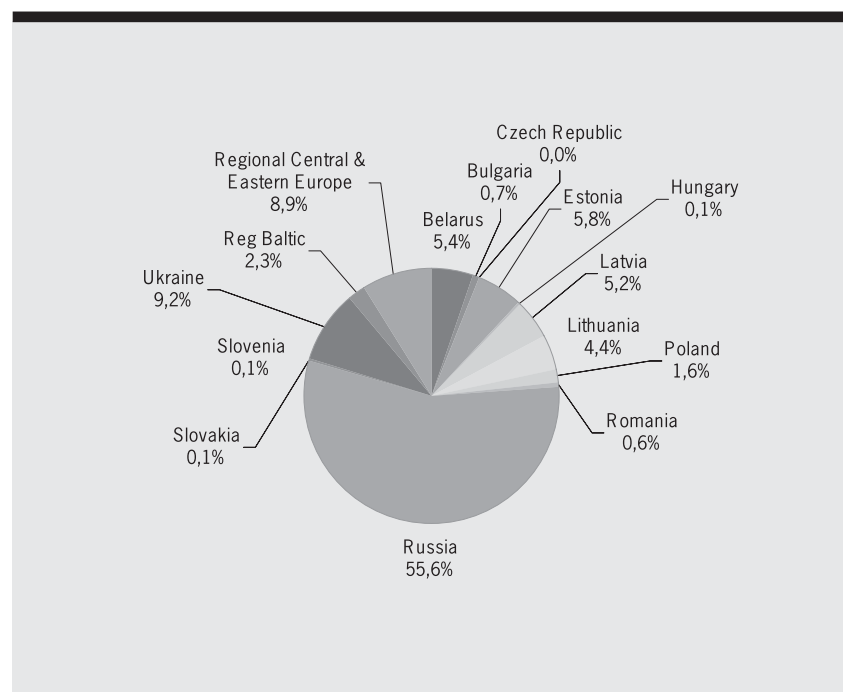

SEK 651 million was allocated as official aid (OA) to Central and Eastern Europe in 2004.

Ukraine, Russia and Belarus have been given priority by the Swedish government. Some 70.2 per cent (SEK 457 million) of the disbursements to Central and Eastern Europe were allocated to these countries.

Some 55.6 per cent (SEK 362 million) of the funds for Central and Eastern Europe were allocated to Russia. The priorities of Sida's co-operation with Russia are support to infrastructure, trade and urban development. Some 35.6 per cent (SEK 129 million) were allocated for this purpose in 2004. In addition 31.2 per cent (SEK 113 million) financed human rights and democratic governance. The social sector with health, education and culture received some 24.6 per cent (SEK 89 million) of the disbursements to Russia.

Ukraine's share of the funds for Central and Eastern Europe were 9.2 per cent (SEK 60 million). Some 59.5 per cent (SEK 36 million) were allocated to Human rights and democratic governance.

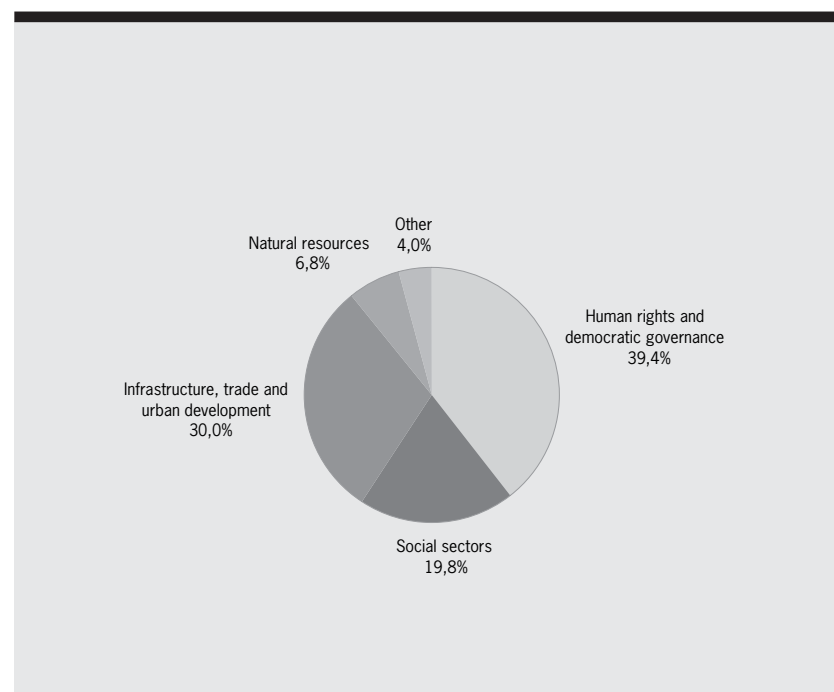

DIAGRAM 13: CO-OPERATION WITH CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE BY COUNTRY 2004

Some 5.4 per cent (SEK 35 million) were allocated to Belarus. Human rights and democratic governance (SEK 17 million) and Social sectors (SEK 14 million) were the largest main sectors in 2004.

The Baltic States received in total 17.8 per cent (SEK 116 million) of the funds for Central and Eastern Europe. Of these 116 million, some 32.8 per cent (SEK 38 million) were allocated to Estonia, 29.0 per cent (SEK 34 million) to Latvia, 24.8 per cent (SEK 29 million) to Lithuania and 13.0 per cent (SEK 15 million) to the whole Baltic region.

DIAGRAM 14: CO-OPERATION WITH CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE BY MAIN SECTOR 2004

8.9 per cent (SEK 58 million) of the the funds for Central and Eastern Europe were allocated to Regional Central and Eastern Europe.

Sida disbursed 39.4 per cent (SEK 256 million) to projects for Human rights and democratic governance, 30.0 per cent (SEK 195 million) to Infrastructure, trade and urban development, and 19.8 per cent (SEK 129 million) to Social sectors. The disbursements for Natural resources projects amounted to 6.8 per cent (SEK 45 million).

Co-operation by country over the years

The disbursements made by Sida to Central and Eastern Europe increased in the first years of the period 1998 to 2004. The highest point was in 2001 with disbursements amounting to SEK 694 million. In 2004 the disbursements were SEK 651 million.

Disbursements to Russia increased from 18.9 per cent (SEK 103 million) in 1998 to 55.6 per cent (SEK 362 million) in 2004. Ukraine increased its share, from 2.8 per cent (SEK 15 million) in 1998 to 9.2 per cent (SEK 60 million) in 2004, as did the disbursements to Belarus, from 0.3 per cent (SEK 2 million) to 5.4 per cent (SEK 35 million) during the same period.

Disbursements to the Baltic countries decreased over the period: in Latvia from 11.8 per cent (SEK 64 million) to 5.2 per cent (SEK 34 million), and in Lithuania from 9.0 per cent (SEK 49 million) to 4.4 per cent (SEK 29 million). Only Estonia increased its share of the disbursements between 1998 to 2004, from 4.4 per cent (SEK 24 million) to 5.8 per cent (SEK 38 million).

CO-OPERATION BY TYPE OF ASSISTANCE

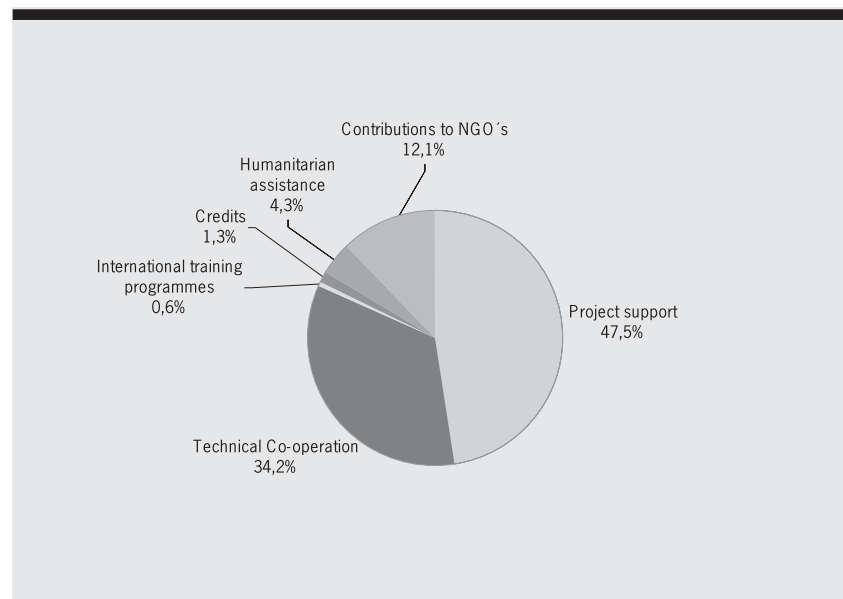

Sida focuses its support to make it correspond to the efforts, reality and development needs of each individual country.

Sida's ten types of assistance also apply to co-operation with Central and Eastern Europe. The types are Project support, Sector programme support, Technical co-operation, International training programmes, Credits, Guarantees, Economic reforms, Humanitarian assistance, Research, and Contributions to NGO:s.

For more information on the types on assistance see the section above in this booklet.

Project support accounted for 47.5 per cent (SEK 309 million) of the disbursements to Central and Eastern Europe while Technical co-operation including

DIAGRAM 15: CO-OPERATION WITH CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE
BY TYPE OF ASSISTANCE 2004

International training programmes received 34.8 per cent (SEK 227 million). Credits received 1.3 per cent of the funds. In 2004 the disbursements for Humanitarian assistance were specially earmarked for this purpose during 2004 and stayed at 4.3 per cent. No funds were allocated through Economic reforms, Guarantees, Sector programme support or Research in 2004.

Contributions to Non-governmental organisations

The so-called project grants are one of the foundations of Sida's co-operation with Swedish NGO:s. They permit the organisations to run activities for which they receive grants from Sida. The main rule is that the NGO must contribute 20 per cent of the total amount of the project.

Today project grants are channelled through 10 so-called frame organisations. These organisations administer the applications for grants from organisations under them and present these to Sida for approval. The 10 frame organisations are:

- Swedish NGO Centre for Development Cooperation (Forum Syd)
- LO/TCO Council of International Trade Union Cooperation
- Olof Palme International Center, OPIC
- PMU – Interlife
- Swedish Save the Children
- Swedish Organisation of Handicapped International Aid, SHIA
- Swedish Missionary Council, SMR
- Swedish Society for Nature Conservation, SNF
- Swedish Cooperative Centre, SCC
- Church of Sweden Aid/ Church of Sweden Mission, SFRV

The frame organisations also receive information grants from Sida for their information projects in Sweden. These projects are intended to improve understanding of development and stimulate opinion in issues related to development and development co-operation.

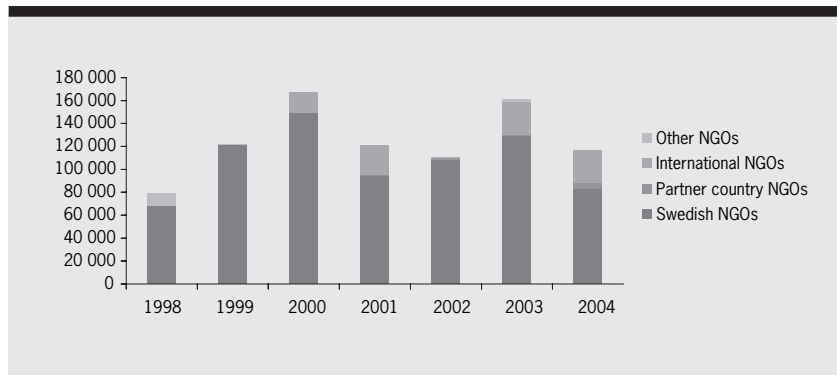

In total, contributions to NGO:s from Sida's different budgetlines to Central and Eastern Europe sum up to 12.1 per cent (SEK 79 million) in the form of the type of assistance "Contributions to NGO:s" (diagram 17). In addition to this, other types of assistance also use NGO:s as a channel for the funds: SEK 37.7 million in 2004.

The disbursements channelled via NGO:s fluctuated during the period 1998–2004. The highest point was in 2000 with disbursements amounting to SEK 167 million. Funds channelled via NGO:s in 2003 stayed at SEK 161 million and decreased to SEK 117 million in 2004. 71.2 per cent of these disbursements were channelled via Swedish NGO:s and 24.3 per cent via International NGO:s.

SIDA'S "POLICY OBJECTIVES"

Three policy objectives are reported to the OECD-DAC each year; Peace, democracy and human rights, Gender equality and Environment and sustainable development. For more information about each policy objective, see the chapter "Sidas policy objective" in section one.

The figures presented under these sections are not to be considered as an indication of the success of projects in the different areas but rather as an indication of the proportion of contributions under the policy objective.

Quality etc.

GENERAL

The information in this publication concerns Sida's development co-operation and co-operation with Central and Eastern Europe, both bilateral and multilateral, in 2004.

All amounts show net disbursements, i.e. amounts paid out minus any repaid amounts (unutilised funds remaining after completion of project or programme which are repaid to donor), in SEK million, current prices.

The figures are obtained from Sida's financial administration and planning system, PLUS, where officers enter statistics relevant to their inputs. The statistics constitute a large part of the report on Sweden's statistics made by Sida to the OECD's Development Assistance Committee (DAC). To make international statistics in this area comparable between donor countries, definitions and directives are written and agreed upon by the member countries of OECD/DAC. Sida makes efforts to make its statistics comparable and correct.

No consideration has been taken of the appropriation accounts or policy areas. The breakdown between development co-operation and co-operation with Central and Eastern Europe is based on the countries.

The development co-operation administration is not shown in this publication, except for Appendix 1. Appropriation accounts.

COMPARISON WITH OTHER PUBLICATIONS

Sida's Annual Report

Sida's annual report shows costs while this publication shows disbursements. The distinction between costs and disbursements concerns accounting techniques. Costs are the sum of the invoices registered during the period of one year. Costs become disbursements only when the invoice has been paid i.e. an invoice may be registered during 2003 but disbursement is not made until 2004.

The operational areas shown in the annual report do not correspond to the sectors presented here.

The figures in the Annual report is mostly based on operational areas. In this publication no consideration has been taken from what policy area the money has been taken. This causes differences in the figures, especially regarding Russia. Approximately SEK 15 million to Russia is not included in appendix 2 in the Annual report since the money is connected to the non ODA policy area Private sector development in the Baltic sea region.
